

UNITED NATIONS SECRETARY-GENERAL Ban Ki-moon has asked the Security Council to extend for another six months the Philippines-led UN peacekeeping operation in the Golan Heights.

In a statement posted on the UN website, Ban stressed the need for the continued presence of the UN Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) in the region at least until Dec. 31. The UNDOF's operation is set to end on June 30.

While noting that the Israel-Syria sector has remained generally quiet, he said that the "situation in the Middle East is tense and is likely to remain so, unless

Roxas seen as stumbling block, says VP camp

2 HOURS WITHIN Vice President-elect Jejomar Binay arrives at President-elect Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino III's Town St. residence for a "warm and cordial" meeting. When he left, he looked overcast.

By GIC Cabanagem Jr. and Norman Borjafora

THE NOV-BI MEETING finally took place yesterday, but it did not result in a clear delineation of Vice President-elect Jejomar Binay's role in the new administration, if any.

Binay said he had accepted a post in the Cabinet of President-elect Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino III. Binay said: "Nothing yet as of now. Let us see what happens in the next few days."

Binay said he had decided "to devote any Cabinet position as an act to honor the President and allow him to focus on the many challenges facing the nation."

Binay said he had conveyed this to Aquino III's family, friend of Binay's, saying: "Nothing yet as of now. Let us see what happens in the next few days."

Burgos' ma: Back to square one

By Nikka Dizon

THE MOTHER OF MISSING activist Juan Burgos yesterday said the Supreme Court's decision on Burgos' case was a setback, ordering the Commission on Human Rights (CHR) to investigate her son's abduction and disappearance in April 2007 and brought her search back to where she started. "I am extremely disappointed as we are back to square one," Burgos said in the process on the phone, adding that she and her family had waited two years for the high court's decision on their appeal after the Court of Appeals threw out their petition for a writ of amparo.

Incensed, exasperated, Burgos said she had wanted the high court to issue a writ of amparo against President Macapagal-Arroyo and the military officials implicated in the abduction of her son at a hotel in Quezon City.

"For the failure of the police to do their job, we are the ones who are disappointed," Burgos said.

SC wants PNP report on missing WB executive

By Dora Z. Pascual

THE SUPREME COURT WANTS to know: What happened to the World Bank executive who went missing and forced to leave his job after being abducted in Manila almost three years ago? In a full-court resolution on Tuesday, the high tribunal directed the Court of Appeals to submit within 10 days its report on the progress of the Philippine National Police investigation of the disappearance of Filipino executive Marcell Taglio. The report was due in March.

Taglio, a World Bank executive, last-enclosed and interior secretary of the Philippine Development Bank, was last seen in Manila on Oct. 31, 2007. While Taglio's fate has remained unknown, government officials are hoping that the Supreme Court's decision will help in his recovery.

DEEDS A community picks up the pieces in the village of Cavite, Cavite, where nine people died in the gas-tanks' explosion, police say.

By Maricar C. Lopez

CARMONA, CAVITE—FROM afar, it looked and cracked like a house of New Year's Eve fireworks. Up close, it was like a rocket-bombing scene from a war movie.

This was how witnesses described the sound and fury of exploding LPG tanks as they erupted out of a two-story brick, craggy structure from a toppled, charred, post, and landed a row of houses made of bamboo bark into a smoldering inferno as around 1 a.m. yesterday.

DepEd disowns sex comics

By Philip C. Tabares

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION recently denied that it was distributing illustrated comic books on sex education to high school students as claimed by the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP).

CBCP members earlier presented to the media copies of sex education comics that they said came from the DepEd.

Education Secretary Maria Valdez denied that the comics books were from the DepEd.

"We never had those in part of our modules. They may have obtained it from other sources but definitely it is not part of our learning modules on sex education," Valdez said in a statement.

"We are not sensitive to the needs of mind as what some persons do in sex," Valdez said, adding that it was only for the CBCP to make public such materials without checking on their source.

Valdez said she has requested to know that the DepEd was teaching sex education in schools unaccompanied.

"Why would we do that? I believe that education is to do for the responsibility of the parents who demand their children from the moral teachings of the Catholic Church. I think you are persons who are not responsible," she said.

Tabares said the DepEd modules that guide teachers on integrating sex education in various subjects were carefully prepared under the kind of understanding of education from Grade 7 to 10-year high school.

"Child psychologists have part of the year that develop these modules and we are careful that when it comes to the sex education modules are appropriate to their age level," she said.

Valdez also said that persons who wanted to have what she happened to see, they should ask the DepEd for a copy and a child with the teachers of the Provincial Council for Values Education (PCV), agreed that schools should teach sex education.

Luisita case falls on Corona's lap

By Dena Pascual

THE RACEDOWN LEWIS Aquino administration, which has been probing for the past few years, has been indicted in the Supreme Court division against by Chief Justice Renato Corona.

The incident was part of the investigation following the retirement of former chief justice Reynato Puno and Corona's appointment last May 17, said court administrator and spokesman for the Supreme Court.

The incident also was, originally assigned to the 3rd Division headed by Corona, was in the 2nd Division after the internal move transfer to the 1st Division. Corona explained that the investigation of the high court division was based on the seniority of justice, so the Mendoza Luisita case leading to Corona's division was part of standard procedure.

Since then, with the justice system, they are assigned to other divisions, the Mendoza Luisita case was transferred to the 1st Division with Corona. The Chief Justice always stays in the 1st Division.

But he added that Mendoza Luisita was the clerk of court to check on the status of the case in response to a request from a militant lawyer group.

HIGH COST OF BASIC EDUCATION 2 more years of school to cost gov't P100 billion

By Philip C. Tabares

IT MAY COST THE GOVERNMENT P100 billion to implement in the next five years, but adding more years to the basic education cycle is a must that the country cannot afford not to have, according to human resources and education secretary.

The addition of two more years of basic education—on top of elementary and another to high school—would place the country on a par with the rest of the world, according to DepEd Sec. DepEd Secretary DepEd Secretary DepEd Secretary.

"It's really about putting on back on track and at a comparable pace with the rest of the world. Currently, we're comprising 12 years of education in just 19 years," said DepEd Secretary.

He did not agree with the opinion that the government should first address the quality of education before adding two more years to basic education.

"We cannot divorce the two. We really need 12 years to move our elementary subjects to basic education," DepEd Secretary said.

"It's universally accepted that you need 12 years of basic education," he said.

Former education undersecretary Juan Miguel Las said that in the current system, the first two years of college are spent studying subjects—general education subjects—that should have been taken up in high school.

He noted how when a financial crisis recently hit Dubai, a construction firm there had to go off their European engineers and replaced them with Filipinos.

But the Philippines was given only the reputation of 25 percent of the European salaries because they spent less time in school, Las said.

Filipinos spend only 14 years in school while Europeans get 17 years of schooling.

Block Hernandez, executive director of the Foundation for Global Education, said that the public school system has to reach around 300 learning centers to be able to reach the 100 million people who live in the country but currently have only 200 school days to do so.

"Right there, you can see that there's no time for the mastery of basic education," Hernandez said.

Noynoy asked to make education top priority

By Philip C. Tabares

WITH ONLY TWO OUT OF 100 SECOND graders "fit for college," President Noynoy Aquino is expected to make education reform a top priority of his administration.

In a press conference, Ramon del Rosario Jr., chair of the Philippine Council for Education, said that the government should make education reform a top priority of his administration.

Former education undersecretary Juan Miguel Las said the education budget should be increased by 5.5 percent annually to match with the growth and to keep on an education-one-million students in school.

Old Noynoy said that, like many systems, education reform is not a top priority of his administration.

He said that the change of power on June 30 would "make well for Philippine education."

AN OPEN LETTER TO PSALM

We, the members of the Federation of Rural Electric Cooperatives of Region VIII (FRECOR VI-II), would like to APPEAL to the national leadership, particularly to the Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Management Corporation (PSALM) to defer the bidding for the PRIVATIZATION of the Unified Leyte Geothermal Assets scheduled on June 25, 2010, in order to give the new administration a chance to review the government's privatization policies and pricing scheme in the power sector.

The government has been maximizing its revenue in the sale of the power plants of the National Power Corporation (NPC) by setting a reserve price based on a market price of a brand new power plant. Previous privatization transactions have shown that the participants have submitted unexpectedly high bids which are way above the reserve price set by the PSALM. It is very unfortunate that government is benefiting from the privatization at the expense of the consuming public who will pay again for the assets that have been paid before through the rates of the NPC.

If the privatization of the Unified Leyte Geothermal Power Contracts will push through under the existing policies and pricing scheme of the government, we fear that it will result in irreversible impact that will continue to increase the electricity rates contrary to the objective of the Electric Power Industry Reform Act (EPIRA).

We urge the public and concerned leaders to support this call for the deferment of the privatization of the remaining NPC Power Contracts to provide ample time for the new government to review, promulgate and implement policies that will lessen the burden of the consumers and make our country globally competitive.

Signed this 22nd day of June 2010 in Guiuan, Eastern Samar.

Both the research efforts will have an indirect impact and that team would be prepared to do so in 1997. Following this initiative is critical, the team also received funding from the "New and safe safety testing" project in the International Nuclear Development Program (INDP) meeting in Australia, and the "Offshore New Knowledge Program" (NKP) testing in China. Along with all the other activities, the Divergent team will continue to be active in the nuclear sector.

Palaweños split hairs over power woes

By Roderick A. Cruz
 Manila Press City

ERVINTE AMIG LIVES IN A remote village called Alabak, on Isabela's hillside. The dense mangrove forest hugging the Malapangas Sound Protected Landscape in the town of Tayog, one of Palawan's richest biodiversity enclaves.

His household survives on a small farm of rice and vegetables, pigs, pigs and chickens—a typical rural profile in over 20 percent of the province's remote areas with no electricity supply.

For Ervin, the broadband, Internet is a vital TV set in a gas-fueled house. "If there is a power outage, I can't see it, I can't hear it," he said in Filipino.

Asked what the government has done so far to address his concerns, Amig pointed to a small, unattended solar panel system which he had installed himself from a town last under the provincial government's solar electrification project over two years ago. The unit will light up two bulbs for three to four hours a day.

"I can't buy a new battery, it's too expensive," he said.

Rural electrification

For an archipelagic province like Palawan, where many communities live on small islands and remote places, electrification is a top priority. But as they look to the power line coming through the island.

The latest 2017 survey shows that the province and roughly 20 percent is not yet served by electricity, and from Marikina, an island in the middle of the province, the government's solar electrification project.

The provincial government's main response that far is its solar power distribution program aided by a similar initiative of the Department of Energy under its 2018 program.

Since the program began in 2007, about 1,000 households have received solar power units. It is partly funded by grants from the Malapangas natural gas project, a pipeline from the gas reserves of 11 billion cubic meters in Marikina in southern Luzon, which also supplies about 10 percent of Marikina's power demand.

Under the program, Marikina explained, a household beneficiary can get the solar panel and equipment for free, but the user must be a resident of Marikina for three years.

She acknowledged that the beneficiaries had been facing difficulty paying, and some have had to stop using the solar panel. "It has been caused by political Marikina said. Many critics were saying the beneficiaries can't pay their bills," she said.

Marikina said the communities would have to be encouraged into paying the bills.

Knee-jerk

To many in the private sector, the government's response to the electrification problem is not electrification, it's politics at best.

"There is no working energy master plan," said Ben Dela, an official of the Palawan Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

Delo expressed concern that the government's latest bills are aimed at addressing the energy requirements of the province as a major business to economic growth. "Energy supply is insufficient and very expensive, which is a disservice to citizens," he said.

Many critics of the solar panel project were egging beneficiaries not to pay their loans

And if the government has not done anything proactive to solve the problem in a strategic sense, the chamber is trying to make it hard on, negotiating with those agencies as the provincial energy master plan can be approved and some work can be started.

"Our immediate concern is the lack of planning. We need a master plan. We need to figure out how much additional power is anticipated, the transmission system all the way to the end-user, the distribution system. It's actually a viable investment area but we have no plan. Nobody can tell what it will be," Delo said.

According to Marikina, a master plan to address long-term electrification and grid power development can be developed with the help of the government's 2018. But, she said, no implementation scheme was in place.

Power misuse

The lobby group Palawan Love Malapangas (PALM) focuses its advocacy on the energy share owned by the provincial government from the Malapangas gas project. It has been very critical of what some 20 billion received by the provincial government from this share over the last five years.

"I accused the provincial government of failing to follow a provision of the Local Government Code, which stated that the bulk of its natural wealth share should go to energy allocation," he said, the money was used for roads and infrastructure projects that were "riddled with corruption and mismanagement."

"The provincial officials even borrowed 30 billion from the Philippine Veterans Bank on the eve of the election and a large chunk of which was supposed to go to the so-called solar power program which is a poorly designed scheme for money printing," Dr. Gerardo Ordoñez of the ELI said.

Subsidy

Because the cost of power generation is expensive in an island setting like Palawan, Ordoñez is not enough to offset the cost, the national government, through the National Power Corp., continues to subsidize Palawan's electricity by around P1 billion a year, according to Delo.

"This is a cause for concern because the provision of supply will mean an end to subsidy. This will make us uncompetitive and it would be disastrous to business. We have to come up with a plan to generate which requires a lot of energy if I don't actually would have an impact on the local economy in many ways," he said.

Power demand continues to increase and supply has reached a tipping point

The ELI says that the power problem "should not only be a problem if it becomes a crisis but if it becomes a crisis, it will be a crisis to which it is intended, which is to be a crisis of the energy situation."

"The provincial government has a duty to pay for increasing the energy allocation share to justify financing the bills to be generated. It will only pay if the bills are made," Ordoñez said. He pointed to a Commission on Audit report on the alleged misuse of Malapangas funds.

Mainland situation

The mainland, which has access to the Bataan main power line of the Luzon, is not without problems either. Power demand continues to increase and supply has reached a tipping point, according to the province's chief executive officer, who said the island's power production (PP) is hardly enough to meet demand, causing bottlenecks to the capital of Marikina and other nearby towns.

The main grid is supplied by three BPP, all of which are under the control of the island's power production (PP) is hardly enough to meet demand, causing bottlenecks to the capital of Marikina and other nearby towns.

With demand peaking at around 30 megawatts, the combined capacity of the power generating plants is just about enough to keep the reserves and no production of power is expected.

The low fuel supply, Palawan Power Generation Inc. (PPGI), was recently the subject of criticism by many consumers groups for its perceived failure to meet its contractual obligations to supply adequate power.

PPGI said the biggest threat to its main regime, which is based in Marikina, is due to be constrained in the main power grid by the end of this month. The region had produced 5.5 MW is sufficient to supply some peak demands.

Delo said another power company, which supplies peaking and reserve power to the main grid, has announced plans to demonstrate use of its supplies for servicing those playing the supply-bid or critical loads in about a week's time.

"We need to be stuck on a technological level," Delo said, commenting on the remaining problem of energy generation and the sustainability of the electric cooperative's commitment to the system.

Concerned with the ongoing cycle of businesses, some modifications must wait as far as shifting down for several days in a row of power.

The Chamber of Commerce has launched a voluntary program to control demand among its members who are major users of electricity. "We need to focus on what we can do as the economy, which is in a state of emergency," he said. "It is our only chance for now," Delo said.

Obama rebukes US general in Afghan war

WASHINGTON—WITH THE RAMPED-UP WAR in Afghanistan at a precarious moment, President Barack Obama prepared to hear his top war commander explain being published complaints about his commander in chief and his aides.

After a brief showdown, the White House's chief of staff, Michael McClellan, suggested it would be best for him to leave the job.

On a routine from Obama, McClellan flew to Washington from Afghanistan to meet Obama's chief of staff for the first time on Wednesday, June 23. The Oval Office and the president's regular weekly war meeting to which McClellan usually presides by video conference.

Two military officials told McClellan was prepared to submit his resignation. They spoke in conditions of anonymity to describe their view on McClellan's resignation publicly.

Obama was set to make an announcement on McClellan's future soon after their last meeting.

"I think it's clear that the article in which he and I were appeared showed a poor—showed poor judgment," Obama said on Tuesday at the close of an over-land Cabinet meeting. "But I do not intend to make any further decisions."

In a follow-up meeting, McClellan didn't resign. Obama later said he called the president last fall when the president was discussing whether to approve more troops for Afghanistan. "He said, 'I don't want to make any more decisions,'" Obama said. "I don't want to make any more decisions."

GEN. STANLEY McClellan, a military anti-war leader, was named by Obama to lead the US war in Afghanistan.

McClellan was said to be "furious" by American and British troops in the US war in Afghanistan. He was said to be "furious" by American and British troops in the US war in Afghanistan.

Maynilad plugs leaks, trims water losses to 53%

By Riza T. Dela Cruz

MAYNILAD WATER SERVICES INC., controlled by Manila Water Investments Corp. and TSM Group Inc., has brought down its non-revenue water losses (NRWL) level to 53 percent as of June 1, 2012, from 60 percent in the same period last year.

This improvement at the First Water said it was able to address over 20,000 leaks during the period converted to a leak-free 16,000 leaks in the same period in 2011.

The 195-percent increase in non-revenue losses translated to nearly 100 million liters a day (MLD) of reversed losses.

Manila Water said the significant reduction in the company's NRWL level is one of its signs of cost-effective equipment, fielding of more than 1,000 employees, and successful leak-squash program for 2012.

For every 1 percent reduction, the utility saves more than 5 million per day of water a day.

Manila said it was proceeding with its aggressive NRWL reduction program by allocating P1.5 billion this year for its NRWL program, for river leak repairs and District Manager Areas establishment and maintenance.

The company recently began using its second-phase mobile leak detector for leak operations.

From Maynilad registers also increasing training on how to operate the newly installed equipment.

Manila said it recently reduced its non-revenue water losses to present in 2007 through a strategic water loss management program.

For 2012, the company wants to bring down its NRWL level to 40 percent.

Manila has partnered with the sign companies to replace NRWL water loss program.

BahayBonds get top rating

By Rona M. Soriano

SOME P1.5 BILLION WORTH OF CLASH BahayBonds issued by the state-run Philippine Mortgage Finance Corp. kept its top rating of P100 A+, according to Philippine Rating Services Corp.

The rating agency said the five-year debt paper issued last year are "of high quality and are subject to very low credit risk."

Also, BahayBonds kept its P100 A+ rating for the Clash BahayBonds worth P100 A+.

These bonds were issued last year as part of P100 A+ "medium-term debt program."

The price was the second low since following the dollar pegged Chinese yuan, ending of which rose to 6.80 percent, according to Reuters.

The US dollar index rose 0.1 percent, while the Euro advanced 0.2 percent, while the British pound fell 0.1 percent.

The central bank however said the country's banking sector remained profitable but year-end 2012 remains a challenge for the Philippines' foreign exchange.

Walk for a Cause 2010

Happy smiles from the whole team of Pizza Hut and Taco Bell who enjoyed the Walk for a Cause 2010.

Pizza Hut and Taco Bell have again strengthened their support to fight world hunger in the recently concluded United Nations World Food Programme (WFP) World Hunger Walk 2010 held at the Fort Benito Grounds, Tagaytay.

Employees of both restaurant brands joined some 8,000 volunteers from different organizations and sectors to gear up the year's walk, leaving the team in Pizza Hut and Taco Bell's CEO Mr. Lou Peterson together with the other executives, all donning their Walk for the World shirts, bringing streamers, colorful balloons and mini flags walked and cheered as they traversed a 3-km ground course.

Gracing the event was actress and WFP ambassador, BC Concepcion, Patricia and Vince Haze also took part of the event as hosts.

"Walk for the World is an annual event to raise money and awareness to fight world hunger and malnutrition. It is a joint effort of WFP and its corporate partners to feed hungry children. Launched simultaneously in 75 countries, the project was inspired by millions of people around the world who walk several kilometers to school everyday - often hungry and barefoot."

For these years too, Pizza Hut and Taco Bell are part of the World Hunger Relief Program and support the United Nations World Food Programme and the company's goal of giving back to the Filipino Community.

Pizza Hut delivery riders led the way in Fort Benito Grounds in Tagaytay for the Walk for a Cause 2010.

Pinoy dessert display wows food lovers in Shanghai

By Margie Bago-Boyer

FELICITY IN SHANGHAI again was alive after the 10-day Food Festival last week. "Heroes of the Philippines," at the Garden Court Restaurant, Hua Tieg Hotel and Towers in Shanghai, China.

The food fest was organized by the Center for International Trade Relations and Mission (CITRM), an attached agency of the Philippine Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), with PRC Shanghai, Philippine Consulate General and the Department of Tourism (DOT) Shanghai.

With the help of Lantao, the only Filipino restaurant in town, and the Mandarin Hotel, where 65 popular dishes from all over the country were presented in a daily buffet consisting of four areas: cold dishes, hot dishes, seafoods and desserts.

But what whetted the appetite of guests was the display of succulent desserts prepared by multi-armed pastry chef, Penk Ching.

Ching created an artistic display of Sugar Halo-Halo Art. Penk Ching served as head chef of the dessert table.

"All ingredients and containers are all sugar—made out of pulled/poured sugar technique, including the glass vessels, which held all the sugar ingredients with sugar crushed ice, sugar spoons, sugar milk tray and a sundae of sugar ice cream," said Ching.

From the transparent halo-halo to containers were made of pulled sugar. The ingredients, such as sugar, butter, flour, mango, pineapple and banana—made of gum paste. It was laid in sugar as banana leaves. To give it a "Pinoy touch," two sugar situations were placed behind the basket.

Ching got the sugar halo-halo idea only when she had a meeting with the organizers last January and pondered how to showcase the country's rich flavors and diverse recipes that are the elements that keep foreigners coming back for more.

Tropical fruits

Ching also created a basket of famous Philippine tropical fruits such as banana, mango, pineapple and banana—made of gum paste. It was laid in sugar as banana leaves. To give it a "Pinoy touch," two sugar situations were placed behind the basket.

The colorful basket was presented in an acrylic case to keep it from dust and humidity.

The basket of fruits was presented during the opening of the food fest, side-by-side with the sugar halo-halo ones.

Ching's subtle three-layered apple halohalo cake was also featured during the opening, which was officially opened by Trade Secretary John A. Lapina and the local mayor.

The cake's first layer was covered with banana leaf, the second layer featured a "Pinoy sundae" and the third layer dusted with powdered sugar and a cherry, which "very well promotes the heritage of the Philippines," Ching said.

Through the halo-halo and fruit basket were not meant to be eaten, they were made to last long all the festival months—or even longer.

In fact, Ching just got a call from the organizers that they were moving the display to the ongoing World Expo Shanghai 2010, where the Philippine Pavilion is holding travel and trade negotiations.

The position displays local products and services for export to international markets, including processed food, personal care products, handicrafts, crafts, and many other products and services that showcase not only the rich natural resources of the country, but also the talent and skills of Filipino. Expo was held Oct. 20.

This was Ching's first time to be invited to the expo where she presented an all-sugar display of food items.

"I'm so happy and honored. I did my country proud," said Ching.

Cool 'cuchinta'.

By Margie Bago-Boyer

MANY ARE LOOKING FOR ways to start a business. Simple dishes or desserts can be the beginning of a home business.

Here is something new, yet cost-effective, if done right way this can modify it according to demand. It is called 'cuchinta' to make but it's one of the easiest recipes among the traditional Pinoy desserts. Kids will not hesitate in helping in the preparation.

"This recipe may be doubled, tripled or quadrupled," notes chef Christine Gans, May Kitchen instructor and demonstration (cell: 0907 1811). "It's also delicious and please make this abundant so that the 'cuchinta' won't stick to the mold."

Delicious pinoy snacks are cheaper to buy in the pinoy marketplaces, than can PT shops.

Normally you get the brown color from the brown sugar, the main ingredient of the recipe, but if you want the color more vivid and shiny, you can add a drop of either yellow or orange foodcolor.

When measuring, it's best to cover the liquid mixture with chocolate (dark) to prevent bubble. It's also best served the day it is cooked and packed with a big bag of hot, steaming mollet (ginger) tea.

Ingredients:
1 cup/100g purple flour
1/2 cup/50g sugar
2 water
1 tsp/5ml oil
Yellow or orange foodcolor (optional)

Eco-friendly and energy-saving cookware

WITH MORE AND MORE HOMEOWNERS embracing the green lifestyle, making responsible choices to meet today's eco-friendly consumer needs.

Using eco-friendly cookware helps you go green because it's made from materials with high sustainability or use less energy. It doesn't use harmful chemicals (PFOA) and neither contains (PFOS), which pollute air and water, and harm human health.

100% Hauswirth offers Bakelite, a German brand of stainless steel cookware, founded in 1959 by Donald House and Adolf Hauswirth in Paderborn, Germany.

By using stainless steel, Bakelite does not deplete the earth's nonrenewable metal resources. Stainless steel is recyclable and good for the environment.

The new Bakelite line at 100 Hauswirth includes the 100 Series and Chef collection. The 100 Series line of cookware from a green angle by using top quality stainless steel and the ceramic-coated Bakelite Ceramic Coating, which is water-based and nonstick. This range is also environmentally designed and also suitable for all heat sources, including induction.

Housewirth will have Bakelite's energy-saving Therma Cookware. Therma cookware is double-walled for faster heating and better heat retention, and is filled in a shiny black ceramic heat that retains heat for up to five hours. This reflects, stores energy even has a low capacity to heat up.

Bakelite's Chef line, on the other hand, combines quality and design. Made of stainless steel, it has a low capacity to heat up to cook food in less time, and decreases use of heat input in the process.

and handles and energy-efficient stainless steel with water-based Bakelite.

100 Hauswirth also shows you how to decrease the amount of energy while cooking.

• Cook food in smaller pieces before cooking. • This will decrease the cooking time on direct heat like stove and pressure, which will in turn decrease the required energy.

• Cook more than one item at a time. For example, food pasta and eggs simultaneously, even if they're in the same range—directly saving on energy use.

• There is a lot of heat and energy loss when you're cooking. To keep the heat in while cooking, use the lowest temperature possible. This allows heat to cook food in less time, and decreases use of heat input in the process.

A cup or more will keep you healthy

WHY TO KEEP BREASTFEEDING WHEN DRINKING

Coffee lovers have a huge reason to delight and enjoy their coffee time. Aside from getting you up in the morning, your daily cup of coffee is actually a source of good health. A lot of studies have shown that drinking coffee can actually prevent certain types of diseases like cancer, heart disease and a lot of others.

According to British Columbia, research at the University of Toronto's Institute of Coffee Studies, which tracks coffee studies from around the world, the overall results of studies conducted on coffee have shown that the fewer times the black line is "be more beneficial than it is harmful."

"The more people, very little health comes from drinking it, but a lot of good."

In drinking coffee not only about enjoying the rich aroma, robust flavor, increased energy and alertness. Coffee drinkers can actually forward to having more health benefits while still enjoying the positive cup.

Reduces gall stones

A study published by the Harvard School of Public Health indicated drinking coffee reduces the risk of gall stones. Coffee drinkers can actually forward to having more health benefits while still enjoying the positive cup.

Reducing risk for Alzheimer's disease. Drinking just one cup of coffee a day reduces the risk of Alzheimer's disease. Coffee drinkers can actually forward to having more health benefits while still enjoying the positive cup.

Can also reduce risk for Parkinson's disease

Studies have shown that the amount of coffee and caffeine consumed could be directly related to an individual's likelihood of contracting Parkinson's disease.

This means the more coffee you drink, the lower your chances are for developing the disease.

According to the studies, people who drink at least four cups of coffee a day are 50 percent less likely to develop the disease.

Source of anti-oxidants

Coffee has been found to be a good source of powerful antioxidants that combat cancer-causing free radicals.

The antioxidants found in coffee begin as caffeine and chlorogenic acid. The acid in coffee helps absorb certain antioxidants, helping to reduce the chances of developing cancer.

You can get antioxidants from other sources, but coffee is a good source of antioxidants.

GRASS RESIDENCES:

Green living at the heart of the city

Grass Residences is poised to provide an oasis amidst the metropolis. Located in the dynamic North EDSA area in Quezon City, it combines the comfort and convenience of urban living with the beauty and serenity of suburban life.

Situated right beside SM City North EDSA, Grass Residences offers unparalleled accessibility. Shopping, dining and entertainment options abound with the mall just mere steps away, while schools, medical institutions and churches are also conveniently near.

To escape from the hustle and bustle of city living, an expansive 75% of Grass Residences will be devoted to creating an oasis of blue and green for its residents. It will be devoted to such nature-evoking elements as landscaped courtyards and gardens, as well as water features and cascades.

Parties and gatherings can be held in the pavilions, lawn and activity areas, while the clubhouse with its multi-purpose function rooms is the perfect venue for important occasions. Sports enthusiasts can enjoy the Tatalian® badminton courts along with the basketball courts within the complex. To top it all off, Wi-Fi access is available in all common areas, perfect for those who need instant Internet connection.

Living in Grass Residences is further enhanced by superior building facilities and services. The grand lobby rivals those of 5-star hotels; lounge areas also ensure comfort for waiting guests.

Grass Residences is one of the many exciting projects of SM Development Corporation across the metro. With its credo "Five-star homes in prime locations now affordable," SM Development Corporation offers residential complexes that boast top-notch quality and service, in enviable locations and at very light payment terms.

To know more about Grass Residences, visit www.smresidences.com or call 858-0300 or 0917-580-5131.

MANILA—MY HUSBAND AND I DECIDED to travel to Singapore for a mini holiday in July, he actually took the view that he needed to head over for a little work, so I asked "What's the use of a mini holiday?"

After looking out windows onto the tinsel night, Agnes and Singsong heard grogginess: a heads-up that we were staying in town for a couple of days, and asked if we could perhaps stay with them. With open arms and food promising cozy beds, they said yes. There's been a long standing tradition to come over in groups in their lovely home. In January most of my visits to Singapore is relaxed walk, it was always predict to stay in a hotel. However, since this trip would be more social than business, we were finally able to secure

The hosts, Marianne and Nancy, came with their son Russell to pick us up at the airport. Their daughter Michelle was at home watching the Game 7 of the Lakers vs. Celtics match up... I was talking to her-Celtics, then at 11, I had been the 1st family in 1995 during a week trip to Singapore, and we've been great friends ever since, so much so that I asked Nancy to stand as one of the bridesmaids at our wedding... they are great people, and are always on top of things with their

Manicured food
